Cutting-Edge Surgical Care of the Pancreas, Liver and Biliary Tract

The surgeons and gastroenterologists at NewYork-Presbyterian Queens, in collaboration with Weill Cornell Medicine, provide multidisciplinary, cutting-edge care in all aspects of advanced surgery of the pancreas, liver and biliary tract.

We provide comprehensive diagnosis, treatment, and follow-up care both to patients with primary neoplasms and metastatic diseases as well as to patients with noncancerous diseases that may affect the pancreas, bile ducts, stomach and liver.

Our team of experts including surgeons, endoscopists, and oncologists discuss every individual case to assess what treatment is best suited, and to streamline the care for each patient. Among the conditions our team treats are:

- Pancreatic cancer
- Intraductal Papillary Mucinous Neoplasms (IPMN)
- Intrahepatic stones
- Hepatocellular cancer
- Cholangiocarcinoma
- Liver metastasis

Whether an endoscopy procedure alone or endoscopy followed by surgical care is required, our multidisciplinary team has evolved a streamlined approach to move patients quickly through diagnosis and treatment.

Our expert team of interventional gastroenterologists performs numerous advanced diagnostic and innovative therapeutic endoscopy procedures including:

- Endoscopic Retrograde Cholangiopancreatography (ERCP) with Spyglass technology
- Endoscopic ultrasound including lithotripsy
- Complex stenting of bile duct and bowel
- Complex gallstone removal from the intrahepatic and extrahepatic bile duct

Our surgical team performs a wide range of lifesaving laparoscopic and open surgical procedures, including the following:

- Whipple procedure (pancreaticoduodenectomy)
- Laparoscopic pancreatectomy
- Bile duct resection
- Complex liver resection
- Laparoscopic liver resection
