Legacy Giving provides a significant portion of the support NewYork-Presbyterian receives annually. The quality of care, facilities, clinical research, and staff are supported by these gifts. Legacy gifts enable us to provide the finest compassionate health care available, and maintain state-of-the-art facilities for patient care and clinical research.

Your legacy benefits our patients, our medical staff, and our community for generations to come. Choosing to make a legacy gift offers numerous advantages beyond the impact of the gift itself:

- You remain fully in control of your assets until the bequest is realized.
- Unlike some other forms of giving, you may modify your bequest at any time during your life.
- Your gift — no matter the amount — can be fully deducted for the purposes of estate taxes.
- Your assets will be distributed according to your wishes.

Legacy Giving is an act of healing that continues into the future. When you create a legacy at NewYork-Presbyterian by making a gift through your will or living trust, you become part of a tradition that symbolizes the spirit on which the hospital was founded: the belief that the health of tomorrow is created today.

It was the generous gifts of two men, Edward Harkness and Payne Whitney, that provided the land and funds necessary to build our Hospital. Were it not for their belief in the importance of leveraging New York’s outstanding medical schools for the benefit of the community, and their willingness to give selflessly, we would not be the hospital we are today. Today, these legacy lives on through the Whitney-Harkness Society, a symbol of the values that make our work possible.

Inclusion in the Whitney-Harkness Society is one of the benefits of making a legacy gift to NewYork-Presbyterian.
