

Emme Levin Deland, MBA

Senior Vice President, Strategy, NewYork-Presbyterian Hospital

Emme Deland is Senior Vice President for Strategy at NewYork-Presbyterian Hospital. In this role, she is responsible for developing both clinical and corporate strategic plans for the hospital. Such plans include service line plans for NewYork-Presbyterian's clinical services, corporate plans e.g. Human Resources and Information Technology, and new initiatives such as MINT- the Minimally Invasive New Technology initiative, and major policy plans such as Health Care Reform. Current projects include health care reform demonstration pilots, access improvement, workforce strategy, physician strategy, IT strategy, capital plan and personalized medicine.

Ms. Deland has spent 30 years in academic centers including NewYork-Presbyterian, Mount Sinai Medical Center and the Brigham and Women's Hospital. Prior to healthcare, Ms. Deland was briefly an international banker at Chemical Bank.

Ms. Deland is a fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine; a Director of the Kornfeld and Zeitz Foundations; a Board member of Planned Parenthood of New York City, Public Health Solutions, American Memorial Hospital in Reims, France and the Brooklyn Hospital; and on the Advisory Board of the Mark Morris Dance for PD. She graduated magna cum laude from Harvard College with a BA in East Asian Studies and obtained her MBA from Columbia University's Graduate School of Business.