Weill Cornell Medicine

Dr. David L. Carr-Locke is a clinician and researcher with particular expertise in GI endoscopy in the diagnosis and treatment of digestive, pancreatic, and biliary disease. A leader in the field of therapeutic endoscopy for more than 40 years, Dr. Carr-Locke plays an instrumental role in the development of minimally invasive options for disease management, including the creation and refinement of endoscopic devices and accessories to advance the least invasive treatment methods.

As Clinical Director of the Center for Advanced Digestive Care, Dr. Carr-Locke oversees the development and implementation of the Center's services, which range from screening colonoscopies to complex endoscopic procedures and surgery. He and his team of GI specialists and researchers are pursuing advances in endoscopic interventions to treat benign and malignant GI tumors, disorders of the bile duct, gallbladder and pancreas; manage metabolic disorders such as diabetes and obesity; and diagnose and treat more disorders of GI tract motility.

Dr. Carr-Locke joins Weill Cornell Medicine from Mount Sinai Beth Israel Medical Center, New York, where he was Chief of the Division of Digestive Diseases and Associate Chair of the Department of Medicine. He is a Past President of the International Hepato Pancreato Biliary Association and the American Society for Gastrointestinal Endoscopy and is currently on the Governing Council of the New York Society for Gastrointestinal Endoscopy.
