

Connecting with Our Communities

Northern Manhattan

NewYork-Presbyterian/Columbia University Irving Medical Center

NewYork-Presbyterian is one of the nation's most comprehensive, academic healthcare delivery systems, dedicated to providing the highest quality, most compassionate care. From Westchester County to the boroughs of Manhattan, the Bronx, Brooklyn, and Queens, we are dedicated to partnering with our neighbors to improve quality of life and provide necessary services in the communities where our patients and employees live and work.

Northern Manhattan

NewYork-Presbyterian/Columbia University Irving Medical Center and NewYork-Presbyterian Morgan Stanley Children's Hospital are located in Washington Heights, and NewYork-Presbyterian Allen Hospital is in Inwood.

Programs

Cancer Services: Funded by the New York State Department of Health and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the Manhattan Cancer Services program was established to reduce cancer outcome disparities among uninsured New Yorkers. The program provides patient navigation and case management to overcome barriers to care and assists with enrollment into the Medicaid Cancer Treatment Program.

Center for Community Health Navigation: This program provides culturally competent, peer-based support in the Emergency Department as well as in inpatient, outpatient, and community settings. Community Health Workers visit patients in their homes and help connect them to resources.

Choosing Healthy & Active Lifestyles for Kids™ (CHALK): A collaboration between NewYork-Presbyterian, Columbia University Irving Medical Center, and the communities of Northern Manhattan, the CHALK program works with schools and community organizations to reduce childhood obesity and create an environment where healthy lifestyles are integral to the lives of all children and their families.

Family PEACE Trauma Treatment Center: Established to help very young children and their families heal from experiences of family violence, abuse, and other trauma, the Family PEACE Center includes treatment and advocacy efforts. The Center is a member of the Washington Heights/Inwood Coalition Against Interpersonal and Domestic Violence and the Upper Manhattan Collaborative.

Lang Youth Medical Program: This six-year, science enrichment and medical pipeline program based at NewYork-Presbyterian aims to inspire and motivate young people from the community to realize their college and career aspirations in the health sciences.

Mental Health First Aid Training: This certification program offers mental health first aid training for youth and adults so they, in turn, can help individuals who may be developing a mental health problem or experiencing a mental health crisis.

Military Family Wellness Center: This innovative program connects U.S. military service members of any duty status and service era and their families with high quality, evidence-based services to help address the unique mental health challenges of service members and their loved ones.

Mobile Stroke Treatment Unit: Established in collaboration with the New York City Fire Department, the Mobile Stroke Treatment Unit is designed to significantly reduce the time from onset of symptoms to delivery of care. Staffed by a team of paramedics and a CT technologist, the unit contains medications for treating strokes and is equipped with a CT scanner for brain imaging.

Turn 2 Us (T2U): Providing mental health promotion and prevention programs to local elementary schools, Turn 2 Us strives to empower the entire school community – students, parents, and school staff. Since its inception, T2U has reached over 10,000 students, caregivers, and school personnel.

Uptown Hub: Serving youth ages 14 to 24 at risk for involvement with the judicial system, the Uptown Hub provides medical care, mental health treatment, and substance use counseling, as well as support for educational attainment, employment readiness, and positive artistic and recreational activities.
